

NISH TAKEN BY BULGARS SAYS BERLIN

PORTANT SERB CITY SAID TO BE OCCUPIED TODAY BY FORCES OF KING FERD. INAND.

SEE END OF SERBIA

Teutons Believe Their Campaign Against Serbs Will Have Been Decided Definitely Within Two Weeks.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, wireless to Sayville, Nov. 6.—The capture of Nish, Serbia, by the Bulgarians was announced officially here today.

Bulgars Enter City.

Amsterdam, via London, Nov. 6.—The telegram from a Sofia news agency says that one Bulgarian division has entered the Serbian city of Nish.

Varvarin Captured.

Berlin, wireless to Sayville, Nov. 6.—The capture of Varvarin, on the Morava river, in Serbia, about forty miles northwest of Nish, was announced today by the German war office. More than 3,000 Serbians were taken prisoners.

The town of Kraljevo, thirty-five miles southwest of Kragujevac also has been captured by the Germans, who are pursuing the Serbians to the east of that point.

The Germans have reached the Zupanyevac district and in the Morava valley have pursued the Bulgarians beyond Obreskic. The Bulgarians' conquest of Nish was effected by three days of heavy fighting. In these engagements the Bulgarians captured 350 Serbians and two cannons.

Near Lukovo, the Bulgarians defeated the Serbians and in the vicinity of Sokobanja, they also won a victory, taking more than 500 prisoners and two cannons.

Victory Over Russians.

The Austro-German forces in Galicia are said by the war office today to have won a further victory over the Russians in the fighting along the Strypa river. The Russians were thrown back to their old position on the east bank of the river. In recent fighting over fifty officers and 6,000 Russians were captured.

Predicted End of Campaign.

Berlin, via London, Nov. 6.—End of the Serbian campaign in two or three weeks is predicted by M. Tonnecheff, Austrian financial minister, in an interview with the Tagblatt.

M. Tonnecheff said the relations of Greece and Bulgaria were "entirely satisfactory" and expressed the belief that King Constantine would remain in Greece as an ally who would maintain successfully the policy of neutrality.

Disarm Russian Ships.

London, Nov. 6.—Roumanian authorities have taken necessary steps to bring into Roumanian harbors and disarm vessels flying the Russian flag which are loaded with arms and ammunition for Serbia, says a semi-official statement issued at Bucharest and received here by wireless from Berlin.

This action has been taken, it is announced, because of the Austro-German occupation of the Serbian banks of the Danube.

Roumanian men of war which fled into the Roumanian harbor, Giurgiu, already have been disarmed and the crews, numbering 850, interned at Kustendje.

AMERICANS RETURN ACROSS THE BORDER

Quartet of Weary Citizens, Thrice Condemned to Death by Villa, Finally Arrive in Safety.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Naco, Nov. 6.—Four weary men, long marching north and suffering from the nervous strain of having thrice been condemned to die by Villa, the four Americans almost dropped in their tracks after crossing the line, and were at once put to bed.

Success Over A Spies.

Thigpen said they were taken for spies when they arrived Wednesday at Agua Prieta, battlefield without provisions. Villa declared them Carranza agents, despite their protests that they had come to aid his wounded lying in wide rows after the terrific battle of bullets and shells from Agua Prieta. An order for their immediate execution was rescinded only after Colonel Bracamonte, of Villa's staff, who knew the doctor, interceded for them.

Oregon Arrives.

Douglas, Ariz., Nov. 6.—General Alberto Obregon, Carranza's principal military commander, reached Agua Prieta today to prosecute a campaign to drive Villa out of Sonora.

The general staff arrived in Douglas from El Paso aboard a freight car which was switched across the sound.

Oconto Boy Is Killed WHEN PLAYMATE FIRES GUN THOUGHT NOT LOADED

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Oconto, Wis., Nov. 6.—Arthur Maurer, ten years old, was accidentally shot and killed when his playmate, Harry Erickson, pointed a gun at him and not knowing it was loaded, pulled the trigger.

MAIN STREET OF NISH, SERB CAPITAL TEUTON ALLIES BOMBARD

Nish, the town in the interior of Serbia which was used as the capital of that country during the first fifteen months of the war, is cut off from the outside world, and is believed doomed. Austro-German armies are near the city, great siege guns have been brought up, and perhaps a bombardment is now under way.

WILSON SCORED BY BERLIN NEWSPAPER

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, via London, Nov. 6.—The Morgen Post attacks President Wilson sharply today for his remarks in his speech in New York on Thursday concerning persons in the United States who are partisans of other causes than that of America, and have forgotten that their chief allegiance is to the American government.

The Morgen Post says the elections of Tuesday brought a heavy moral defeat for the president, and that his speech was in retaliation for "this German-American punishment" and was obviously directed against German-Americans.

The form of the president's speech, the newspaper asserts, was such as had never been heard from an American president and such as would not have been considered possible from the head of a state.

The Morgen Post asserts that in view of the pronounced hatred of Germany prevailing in America, the speech could lead to "the worst consequences." It declares President Wilson expressed "his aversion for, and low estimate of, German-Americans," and specifically denied all allegations to the effect that it has done anything illegal or unlawful.

The answer of the bureau companies points out that casualty insurance companies in Germany have obtained service in promulgating rates, inspecting risks and computing the merit rating credits.

"Respondents deny that said bureau was organized or has been, or is maintained for the purpose of purposes set forth in said petition or for any unlawful purpose whatsoever," the answer of the bureau companies says. "Respondents deny that said bureau has unlawfully classified industries and deny that said merit rating schedule has been used for the purpose of unlawfully compelling companies not members of said bureau, and deny that any discounts or charges under said merit rating schedule has been improperly made in any case."

FIFTEEN PROVINCES VOTE FOR MONARCHY

All But Three of Chinese Provinces Favors Change From Republican Government.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Peking, Nov. 6.—Fifteen of the eighteen provinces of China already have voted for a restoration of the monarchy. Minister of Foreign Affairs Lu Cheng-Hsiang told M. Obata today, secretary of the Japanese legation.

This, he said, was the government's reason for feeling that it could not legally defer the decision of the people.

It is reported reliably that the government may request the council of state to legalize the postponement of the monarchical restoration if it is finally decided upon.

U. S. STEEL HEAD SEES GOOD TIMES

Says Steel Outlook Reassuring and No Reason Why Present Business Should Not Be Permanent.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Pittsburgh, Nov. 6.—James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, said here last night that he was confident of the future of the steel industry in this country.

Mr. Farrell said the conditions would involve "heavy expenditures" and that other plans when matured would be given out.

"I see no reason for fearing that general business improvement will not be permanent," he added. "The steel outlook is very reassuring."

DEMOCRAT LEADING IN KENTUCKY VOTE

Administration Party Candidate Still Retains Lead Four Days After Election.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 6.—Four days after the ballots were cast August O. Stanley, democrat, was leading Edwin P. Morrow, republican, by 571 votes in a contest for governor of Kentucky. Official returns from 116 counties of 120 in this state, together with unofficial but apparently reliable returns from the remaining four counties, gave him this majority.

KING'S IMPROVEMENT CONTINUES STEADILY

Last Bulletin to be Issued States He Will be Confined to His Room for Some Time.

London, Nov. 6.—Continued improvement in the condition of King George, who was injured last week by a fall from his horse in France, was reported today in the following official bulletin:

"The king had a better night. He was able to be moved to a couch for a few hours. He is progressing satisfactorily, though it will be some time before he is able to leave his room. No further bulletins will be issued."

ALL CHARGES DENIED BY CASUALTY FIRMS

Insurance Companies File Answer to Complaint Entered by Neal Brown of Wausau.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Nov. 6.—A complete denial of "rate" discriminations for workmen's compensation insurance is contained in the petition of the over twenty companies belonging to the Workmen's Compensation Bureau, which has just been filed with Insurance Commissioner M. J. Cleary. Early last month Neal Brown of Wausau filed a complaint with the insurance commissioner charging that the companies who belonged to the bureau indulged in discriminatory rates. He asked that they be ousted from the state. The answer for all of the companies filed by the firm of Olin, Butten, Stebbins & Stroud of this city, makes a complete denial of the charges.

The case has been set for hearing before Commissioner Cleary for Nov. 15, but the lawyers on each side admit that a continuation will be asked for in order to secure more evidence. A separate answer is filed by the Continental Casualty Company of Chicago, in which it says that it has never been a member of the Workmen's Compensation Service Bureau and specifically denied all allegations to the effect that it has done anything illegal or unlawful.

The answer of the bureau companies points out that casualty insurance companies in Germany have obtained service in promulgating rates, inspecting risks and computing the merit rating credits.

"Respondents deny that said bureau was organized or has been, or is maintained for the purpose of purposes set forth in said petition or for any unlawful purpose whatsoever," the answer of the bureau companies says. INSANE MAN KILLS WIFE AND DAUGHTER

Seattle Plumber Slaya Wife and Blind Daughter and Wounds Others.— Takes His Own Life.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 5.—George S. Roberts, a plumber, killed his wife and blind daughter with an ax, probably fatally wounding two children, and then shot himself dead here today. He is believed to have gone insane as a result of a recent injury.

The dead crushed: Ella Roberts, 17, shot through head. Mrs. Roberts and the boy were asleep when they were attacked. Indications were that the boy awoke and fought with his father.

ITALIAN CONSUL'S OFFICE IS TARGET

Bomb is Hurled at Building in New York City But Slight Damage Results.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Nov. 6.—The third attempt within a year to wreck the offices of the Italian consul general, with a bomb, was made today. The explosion, which had been hurled from a nearby roof, struck the pavement a short distance away from the building, exploded with a roar that was heard for blocks, rent apart the cobblestones, cracked the neighborhood and filled the street with a rain of broken glass, but caused slight damage otherwise and failed to injure anyone.

The consul general and his staff were in their offices at the time the 150 Italian revolutionists who were presumably seeking to return home.

A policeman detailed to guard the daily stream of residents that poured through the office and traffic police men nearby, turned in an alarm, and from police headquarters, a block away, detectives and reserves were alerted to the scene in squads. They at once spread a cordon about the place and in their dragnet, temporarily detained everyone who could not give convincing reason for his presence in that neighborhood.

POLICE SEIZE PLANT OF THE LONDON GLOBE

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, Nov. 6.—The printing plant of the London Globe, together with copies of the issues of yesterday and today, were seized by the police this afternoon.

STATE TEACHERS FAIL TO ADOPT AMENDMENT

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Milwaukee, Nov. 6.—Action on the amendment to the constitution of the Wisconsin Teachers' Association that provide for sectional meetings in six parts of the state in the odd numbered years, and a state meeting in Milwaukee in the even numbered years, was indefinitely postponed at the closing session here today.

A resolution was presented and passed that provides for the appointment of a committee of seven, one from each section, including the president.

WIDENER SUCCUMBS AT ADVANCED AGE

Prominent Philadelphia Financier is Dead at Age of Eighty-One Years.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Philadelphia, Nov. 6.—A. R. Widener, widely known financier, died at his home at Elkins Park, near here today.

Mr. Widener has been ill for some time. He has been a dominant factor in street railway systems of this city, New York, Chicago and other cities. He was eighty-one years old.

Widener's death is believed to have been due to advanced age. Mr. Widener spent twenty years of his early life in the political field, and only got out of it to begin his noted career as a financier in 1874, when he was elected in a Philadelphia mayoralty contest.

He was previously he had been city treasurer.

Mr. Widener began the financial operation by which he eventually accumulated a fortune estimated at $60,000,000 by buying a few shares of street railway stock here and there, and he finally became a controlling factor of all Philadelphia street railways.

In 1890 Mr. Widener in association with William L. Elkins, Wm. S. Whitney, Thomas F. Ryan, Charles T. Yerkes, and others began to secure other railways in other cities.

KITCHENER LEAVES ON A MYSTERIOUS VISIT TO BALKANS

British Field Marshal Has Already Left London on an Important Mission to the Near East.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, Nov. 6.—The Post says that Earl Kitchener, secretary of war, has been entrusted with an important mission to the near east and has already departed from London.

In an official statement issued in London yesterday denial was made of reports that Kitchener had resigned and it was said Premier Asquith was in charge of the war office during the temporary absence of the field marshal. This was the first intimation that the war secretary had departed from London.

The policy of the British government in respect to both the Dardanelles expedition and Serbian campaign has been subject to severe criticism in England, and the statement of the Post is correct, the war secretary presumably has been entrusted with a near east to determine by personal inspection the proper policy for Great Britain or to supervise some movement of importance already decided upon.

It was officially announced this evening that Field Marshal Earl Kitchener had gone to the east theatre of war. The statement reads: "Earl Kitchener at request of his colleagues has left England for a brief visit to the eastern theatre of war."

DANIELS' NEWSPAPER PLANT BURNS DOWN

Building Occupied by Raleigh, N. C. News and Observer, is Destroyed by Fire Today.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 6.—The entire plant and building of the News and Observer, owned by the secretary of the navy, Joseph Daniels, was destroyed by fire which started shortly before six o'clock this morning. The large printing establishment of E. M. Uzzell & Company is also a complete loss. Several small stores are either retailers or completely destroyed.

W. H. Bagley, business manager of the News and Observer, was painfully but not seriously injured, by a falling piece of machinery while attempting to get books out of the building. First estimates of the property loss of the fire still burning are about $250,000.

It was the second time the News and Observer have been burned out since Secretary Daniels has been head of the navy department, the first having occurred April 2, 1914.

The fire started in the plant of Uzzell & Company, and shortly after an explosion which flames attributed to gas, sent flames into the adjoining News plant. "Nothing" was saved from either plant.

Temporary offices of the News and Observer have been established in the plant of the Raleigh Times, and the hundreds of employees engaged in the building will be housed in the morning. Secretary Daniels was notified by telephone and immediately left Washington.

CHAMPAGNE REGION SCENE OF FIGHTING

German Attack Repulsed Says French Report.—Losses Supplies in Advance.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, Nov. 6.—A fresh German attack against French positions at La Courneuve has resulted in failure, according to a communication made this afternoon by the French war office.

The text of the communication follows:

"From the Champagne district there was reported last night a fresh German attack against our trenches at a position known as La Courneuve, which resulted in complete failure.

"During the fighting with mines which is going on almost without interruption between the Argonne and Meuse, the blowing up this morning of one of our collections of explosive materials, and damaged seriously certain detachments in the sectors of Marancourt. The night passed with relative calm on the remainder of the front."

LUXEMBURG CABINET IS NEXT TO RESIGN

Paris, Nov. 6.—Grand Duchess Marie of Luxembourg, today accepted the resignation of the Luxembourg cabinet and charged Dr. Latsch, a lawyer, to form another ministry.

In reply the Frankfurt paper declares among other things, that the Hefflicher announcement was made in America chiefly with a view to influencing public opinion there against the British loan which was then pending. "Such complaints" says the reply, "prove that a large section of the German public has but little understanding for what real politics render necessary and appropriate. The statement of the secretary of state for finance was primarily intended not for the German public but for foreign countries and especially the United States, where England was making desperate efforts to float a loan.

"When efforts are made at such a time to show the American people that Germany is in a desperate financial situation, the action seems so sagacious and such a matter of course that it is surprising that anyone should dare to speak of preference being shown to the foreign press," declares the paper. "It was most essentially a matter of political expediency that Dr. Hefflicher's statement should be made direct to the American newspapers."

"Moreover, the German foreign office has often found it prudent to use the foreign press as its mouthpiece." In closing, the article bids the German public to remember that "our living statesmen did only what the great Bismarck did, especially during the war of 1870. Bismarck knew perfectly well why he accorded a privileged position to the representative of an English newspaper."

FRED FULTON STOPS KELLER IN FOUR ROUNDS; MITCHELL IS SIGNED

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 6.—Fred Fulton, the Rochester giant, won from Terry Keller of Australia by a technical knockout in their scheduled ten-round bout here last night. The third round saw the beginning of the end for Keller, who was knocked out by a heavy slug of Fulton and was almost helpless, the bell saving him. In the fourth three rights out Keller to the mat each time, and Referee Harry Stout stopped the fight.

Mitchell vs. Kilbane.

Milwaukee, Nov. 6.—Ritchie Mitchell, the Milwaukee idol, who recently held Champion Johnny Kilbane to a draw, has been matched to meet the featherweight king again in a twelve round bout at Toledo, Ohio, on November 22nd.

Burns vs. Williams.

New Orleans, Nov. 6.—Frankie Burns, Jersey City, bantam weight, will meet Kid Williams, champion of the bantamweights, in a championship bout here over the twenty round route of November 28th.

Kansas City, Nov. 6.—Jimmy Regan won a decision over Battling Nelson, ex-lightweight champion, in a ten round bout here last night. Regan outboxed "Bat" all the way.

GERMAN SUBMARINES SINK THREE SHIPS IN MEDITERRANEAN

Submarines Pass Straits of Gibraltar and Torpedo Two French and One Italian Steamers.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, Nov. 6.—The Straits of Gibraltar have again been passed by German submarines, which on Thursday sank two French and one Italian steamships. The crew of one of the vessels is missing.

The following statement was made by the marine ministry today:

"The enemy's submarine, coming from the Atlantic, passed through the Straits of Gibraltar on November 4. They sank on November 4 the French ship Dahra, off Arzeul, Algeria, and the French ship Calvados and the Italian ship Ionio, near Cape Ivi.

"The crews of the Dahra and Ionio were saved. There is no news from the crew of the Calvados."

The sinking of the Ionio was reported from London last night. The Dahra, 2,127 tons gross, sailed from Port Cabel, Wales, on October 7, for Tunis. The Calvados is not mentioned in marine records. German submarines have penetrated the Straits of Gibraltar previously during the war. This is the first accomplished successfully since Captain Hersing made his first trip with the U-51 from Germany to Dardanelles last year.

In September a number of merchantmen and transports were sunk in the Mediterranean by submarines, but no reliable news has been received of their activity.

All On Board Saved.

Algiers, via Paris, Nov. 6.—The steamship Sid Ferruch was sunk yesterday forty miles off this port by a German submarine. The crew of twenty-eight men arrived today at Algiers and carried no passengers.

British Vessel Sunk.

London, Nov. 6.—The British steamship Woodfield, 3534 tons, has been sunk. All the crew is believed safe.

FINED FOR DRIVING PAST A STREET CAR

Forest Kemmerer of Clinton Pays Fine of Ten Dollars and Costs for Traffic Violation.

Forest Kemmerer, a resident east of Clinton, was the first man to be fined for driving past a street car while the car was being received or were getting out, under the new city ordinances. It is also the first case of a penalty being imposed for this violation on record.

Kemmerer was arrested yesterday afternoon at 5:55 o'clock by Officer Frank Albright at the corner of Main and Milwaukee street, when he drove his auto around the corner when the Main street car was stopped at the intersection. His car was promptly made and this morning a complaint was made by City Attorney Dougherty and a warrant issued.

When arraigned in court the Clinton auto driver pleaded guilty to the charge, and on the recommendation of the city attorney the minimum fine of ten dollars and costs was assessed by the court. The fine and costs amount to $12.40 and are paid by Kemmerer.

"All that the city desires is to have these regulations obeyed. It is not that the city cares for the fines or the convictions, and that is why I recommended that the smallest fine possible be imposed," said City Attorney Dougherty. "This makes the second arrest of a person for this violation. The police have made within the past week for traffic violations, and strict orders are given to the patrolmen by Chief of Police P. D. Champion for their enforcement."

The two drivers were before the court this morning and both received jail sentences. Edward Grant was given seven days in default of a five dollar fine and Carl Meisch was given fifteen days, being able to pay a fine of ten dollars.

WILL EXTEND STORM SEWER ON OAKLAND

City Maps Out Plans for the Construction of Storm Sewers for Drainage Water.

Negotiations have been closed by the city of the extension of the storm sewer on Oakland avenue at a future date, up through the ravine off Jackson street, by obtaining the right of way through the property of the Milwaukee Road, and the purchase of several lots owned by the Jackson estate. This year the concrete sewer will be constructed up the ravine a short distance, where it will be joined to the existing sewer. Next year the sewer will be extended through the hollow to a point midway between Third street and Oakland avenue and then on Garfield avenue to the Milwaukee Road.

After completing the Oakland avenue sewer as far as this year's plans specify, the workmen will turn their attention to the extension of the Pioneer street sewer, which is owned by the city council. The next job to be undertaken after this is the construction of a storm sewer on North River street, to prevent the discharge of water from the Milwaukee Road, owned by the Blodgett Milling company. This work will be done this year according to the present plans of the city commission. The work of extending the Oakland avenue sewer from Main street to the river will also probably be done this year.

There is just one more storm sewer, where it was mentioned, which the city is considering constructing in the future. The other is what is known as the Glenn street sewer, to be built on Glenn street along or through the railroad embankment to Rock river. The city has never been able to reach satisfactory arrangements with the railway companies for the right of way along the embankment, but it is among the commissioners' settlements can be reached for the laying of the concrete sewer within the next two or three years.

"Moreover, the German foreign office has often found it prudent to use the foreign press as its mouthpiece." In closing, the article bids the German public to remember that "our living statesmen did only what the great Bismarck did, especially during the war of 1870. Bismarck knew perfectly well why he accorded a privileged position to the representative of an English newspaper."

FRED FULTON STOPS KELLER IN FOUR ROUNDS; MITCHELL IS SIGNED

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 6.—Fred Fulton, the Rochester giant, won from Terry Keller of Australia by a technical knockout in their scheduled ten-round bout here last night. The third round saw the beginning of the end for Keller, who was knocked out by a heavy slug of Fulton and was almost helpless, the bell saving him. In the fourth three rights out Keller to the mat each time, and Referee Harry Stout stopped the fight.

Mitchell vs. Kilbane.

New Orleans, Nov. 6.—Frankie Burns, Jersey City, bantam weight, will meet Kid Williams, champion of the bantamweights, in a championship bout here over the twenty round route of November 28th.

Kansas City, Nov. 6.—Jimmy Regan won a decision over Battling Nelson, ex-lightweight champion, in a ten round bout here last night. Regan outboxed "Bat" all the way.

WILSON SCORED BY BERLIN NEWSPAPER

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, via London, Nov. 6.—The Morgen Post attacks President Wilson sharply today for his remarks in his speech in New York on Thursday concerning persons in the United States who are partisans of other causes than that of America, and have forgotten that their chief allegiance is to the American government.

The Morgen Post says the elections of Tuesday brought a heavy moral defeat for the president, and that his speech was in retaliation for "this German-American punishment" and was obviously directed against German-Americans.

The form of the president's speech, the newspaper asserts, was such as had never been heard from an American president and such as would not have been considered possible from the head of a state.

The Morgen Post asserts that in view of the pronounced hatred of Germany prevailing in America, the speech could lead to "the worst consequences." It declares President Wilson expressed "his aversion for, and low estimate of, German-Americans," and specifically denied all allegations to the effect that it has done anything illegal or unlawful.

The answer of the bureau companies points out that casualty insurance companies in Germany have obtained service in promulgating rates, inspecting risks and computing the merit rating credits.

"Respondents deny that said bureau was organized or has been, or is maintained for the purpose of purposes set forth in said petition or for any unlawful purpose whatsoever," the answer of the bureau companies says. "Respondents deny that said bureau has unlawfully classified industries and deny that said merit rating schedule has been used for the purpose of unlawfully compelling companies not members of said bureau, and deny that any discounts or charges under said merit rating schedule has been improperly made in any case."

INSANE MAN KILLS WIFE AND DAUGHTER

Seattle Plumber Slaya Wife and Blind Daughter and Wounds Others.— Takes His Own Life.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 5.—George S. Roberts, a plumber, killed his wife and blind daughter with an ax, probably fatally wounding two children, and then shot himself dead here today. He is believed to have gone insane as a result of a recent injury.

The dead crushed: Ella Roberts, 17, shot through head. Mrs. Roberts and the boy were asleep when they were attacked. Indications were that the boy awoke and fought with his father.

The pioneers of Iowa, the greatest agricultural state in the Union, saw the wisdom of a law modeled after the currency law of the United States which would protect its holders of insurance contracts. This law, almost as old as the company, prescribes that our assets shall consist of first mortgages on farms which at present represent 90 per cent of our assets and are in turn secured by practically four times their value. Municipal bonds loans on policies and our Home Office building comprise the balance of our assets. This law which prescribes the kind of assets the company shall invest in, also demands these assets to be deposited with the state, thus making the state a trustee for the fulfillment of your contract.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The strongest bond of human sympathy outside of the family relation should be one uniting all working people of all nations, tongues and kindreds, nor should this lead to a war on property or owners of property. Property is the fruit of labor. Property is desirable—is a positive good in the world. That some should be rich shows that others may become rich, and hence is just encouragement to industry and enterprise. It is not him who houseless pull down the house of another, but let him labor diligently and build one for himself, thus by example assuring himself that his own shall be safe from violence when built.—Lincoln.

This kindly sentiment comes to us like a voice out of the past. The thought which prompted it was characteristic of the great man who gave it expression, for Lincoln came from the common people, and was always in close touch with humanity.

"The Birth of a Nation" calls back vividly the stirring days of Lincoln's time, and the young people of today find in this wonderful panorama an object lesson which was intensely real to the men and women of the Lincoln administration.

The proclamation of emancipation, which gave freedom to a race, called for human sympathy, and while the great emancipator was not permitted to live to aid in extending personal sympathy and encouragement, the impress of his life remains as a choice heritage, to the race once in bondage.

It may not be out of character to say in passing, that while the "Birth of a Nation" may be a great educator, it is entitled to all the criticism reserved because of its years of residence in the days of reconstruction, and the hand and brain which gave freedom to a race of ignorant children, was not present to guide them, and his successor, Andy Johnson, was not equal to the strain.

The "carpet bagger" of the north found a fertile field in the desolated south, and the colored man became an easy victim. The "Ku Klux Klan" was the great vigilance committee, which faded away as soon as law and order was established.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a portrayal of the horrors of war and the days of reconstruction, deprived of the atmosphere, which accounted for many things. It revives experiences long since forgotten, and which might better be buried in oblivion. The colored people object to the picture, as they have a right to do. It may be historical, but not of great value as an educator.

When Mr. Lincoln wrote the little paragraph on human sympathy, he had in mind the race of bondmen. His prophetic vision grasped the situation and he realized the importance of mutual charity and mutual helpfulness.

The lapse of half a century has settled some of the problems of reconstruction, but the race problem continues. If it is ever solved it will be solved by the people of the south, because it is a southern question. The colored race is a southern product and will continue to be.

Mr. Lincoln realized that these people were to remain on southern soil. He wanted to inspire in their hearts a respect for property and an ambition to become property-owners, because he knew that this kind of respect and ambition was necessary to the peace and welfare of the nation.

History has been making rapidly since Mr. Lincoln's time, and while American slavery has not been a part of it, other questions of absorbing interest have claimed attention, and many of them have not yet been settled.

Efforts have been made by agitators and disturbers to stir up class hatred, and the seeds of envy have taken root in congenial soil. "The man with the hoe" has been made to feel that his lot in life is not desirable, and so the people who toil with their hands, have been labeled as "God's patient poor," entitled to every consideration.

Mr. Lincoln came from the ranks of this class of workers, and the little message which he brought them, is full of significance. He knew nothing about class, and when he said that "property is the fruit of labor," he gave a broad and comprehensive definition.

"That some should be rich shows that others may become rich," are also words of wisdom, and no sounder advice ever offered than is expressed in the following paragraph: "Let not him who is houseless pull down the house of another, but let him labor diligently, and build one for himself, thus by example assuring himself that his own shall be safe from violence when built."

That's the refreshing doctrine compared to a lot of the clap-trap oratory of the present day and generation. Mr. Lincoln did not believe in the equal distribution of property, either by force or legal enactment. Neither did he believe in confiscation by unjust and burdensome taxation, a method just now so popular.

He believed that every American citizen was a sovereign, and if he was living today he would have no sympathy for the hyphenated class, or any other class which lacked appreciation. He believed that ambition should prompt every American to work out his own destiny, in this land so full of opportunities.

This is the doctrine which should be taught today from every pulpit and platform, and from every school house in the land. It is time for us to forget that the toilers of the land are confined to the men and women who gave a given number of hours for a given number of dollars.

The people who do not work, in this country, are either tramps or undesirable citizens. The American people are a fraternity of workers, and so many of their interests are in common that the fraternity should be mutual.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., recently spent a month in the Colorado coal fields among the miners employed by the company in which he is interested. He spent more time not only as a stranger, but many of the men regarded him as an enemy to labor, and a tyrant.

Today he is the most popular man in that great mining district, noted for trouble, and the most serious labor disturbances. The personal touch was all that was needed, and the men in the mines soon discovered that the Wall Street capitalist was a whole-souled, big-hearted man and a friend.

Mr. Rockefeller became a miner for a few days, and by putting himself in the other fellow's place, he came to understand their grievances and hardships.

It would be well for the country if the men who furnish the muscle and the men who provide the payroll could touch elbows in the same friendly way. When this becomes a practice, capital and labor will work together and the spirit of envy will cease to exist.

There is a quarrel in nearly every family and, as a general thing, it is about money.

Some women have children and others only theories as to how children should be reared.

When a man feels he is through with women, he should stay away from them. If he exposes himself he is pretty sure to be infected a second time.

Locating the woman is the basis of all successful detective work.

Nearly every girl is left-handed for a while after her engagement is announced.

Those who insist on sitting in the reserved seats always have to pay a little more than the accommodation is worth.

When people desire to praise a stepmother they say, "She treats his children as well as if they were her own."

The man who invented circus lemonade is dead. But most of those who drank it were saved by the doctors.

There still are a number of sterling citizens who believe the proper place to wear evening clothes is in a photograph.

A boy often gets the worst of it. In a good many instances he affords his father the only opportunity the latter ever has to show his authority.

All a man knows about another man's clothes is that they are sufficient to prevent his arrest for exposure of person.

"This," said Slim Heckle yesterday, "ought to be a good year for the lozenge makers. All of the politicians and a good many of the statesmen have lost their voices."

RAMBLING BOB HAS A RAMBLING TALK

THINKS SHERMAN WORTH CONSIDERING AS PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITY.

GOVERNOR IS EXTOLLED

States That Philipp Creates Not a Political But an Efficiency Machine By His Appointments.

N. B.—This is one of a series of articles written exclusively for the Gazette on Wisconsin politics.

By Bob Acres.
Chicago, Ill., Nov. 5.—This is a funny place to be writing on Wisconsin politics, but I am here more on business and if I am to deliver a "Message to Garcia" this week I must write it from the famous Windy City. Take it from me it is a windy city in truth. I never ran into such a cloudburst of anti-administration oratory, no not even down in Washington when every officeholder expected to lose his job the next week.

But it is Mayor Thompson's business, and how he manages the Sunday closing in his own halliwick is nothing to Wisconsin politicians unless they come to Chicago on a Sunday for a conference and forget to lay in their supply of "freshness ammunition." Saturday night, I will say, however, in political circles Sherman has the call.

I said some time ago I was going to look into this Sherman boom. I begin to believe that United States Senator Sherman of Illinois is very careful consideration. I think he is a bigger man than a whole lot give him credit for. He is not an Abraham Lincoln or a George Washington. He is not an extreme. I can think of for the minute, but he is a good sound man. A man of the people and with lots of common sense.

I like to hear a man's neighbors speak well of him, and they do down there. They are not blinded by the favorite son idea either, for some of the men who talk of him and his character and worth are Democrats. That can see nothing but Wilson's reelection no matter who is nominated against him. Poor, deluded and blind fools.

Well, the eastern election returns tell us a funny story. We read it as we wish. It is a republican gain all along the line. It is a gain in more ways than one, for it marks the uniting of the republican party again into one compact organization. It marks the defeat of the federalist constitutional party in New York state for which he so earnestly worked.

This talk about Hughes as a republican possibility looks to me to be somewhat stretched. The west, the middle west, yes, and the near east, are going to have something to say about the presidential nomination and who they will support, and not Wall Street or the money and industrial centers of the east.

In fact I might state right now that I do not think that either of these interests need be considered in the selection of a presidential candidate by the republicans this year at all, because the republican idea has come to stay in Badgerdom. I know different. I have talked with a whole lot of republicans. Men who have always voted for La Follette and men who have not. I find the La Follette men, while they are a bit doubtful, are still loyal to the ideal and it will take more than the seaman's bill, in this inland state, to shake their confidence in the "Little Boss."

I find the general consensus of opinion is that Philipp is making a mighty fine governor among men of all political beliefs. The idea that a conservative republican idea has come to stay in Badgerdom. I know different. I have talked with a whole lot of republicans. Men who have always voted for La Follette and men who have not. I find the La Follette men, while they are a bit doubtful, are still loyal to the ideal and it will take more than the seaman's bill, in this inland state, to shake their confidence in the "Little Boss."

I want to say one thing right here to my republican friends in Wisconsin. I believe honestly they are making a mistake in underestimating the actual strength of both La Follette and McCarroll. The idea that a conservative republican idea has come to stay in Badgerdom. I know different. I have talked with a whole lot of republicans. Clearly. Kubasta is too valuable a man for the state to lose the services of simply over a quibble as to whether he could draw a certain salary or not because he was a member of the legislature that created the office. Clearly is making a first class insurance commissioner and Kubasta is needed right where he is to aid in the work.

In this connection I wish I could tell you in cold print the nasty, little, insignificant, annoying things that the members of the radical republican regime of industrial commissioners are playing on the last member named, George Hambrecht, to hinder his work and hamper his efficiency. It would make you sick, but it is a part with all the little trivial actions that the "progressive hold-over" capitol employees are doing to hamper the administration and belittle the efforts being made at it.

I do not claim that Governor Philipp is a perfect man, but I do say that he is a man among men and as a governor we have not had one in years that has devoted the thought and brain power to the development of the state and its resources as is our present chief executive. He may have made political mistakes, but he is not a political governor. He has no state machine to oil. He is not making appointments for future political service in return. He is putting the best man he can secure in the various positions as they fall vacant.

This is a strange world we live in, but when we start to criticize a man for seeking to save the state thousands, hundreds of thousands and even millions of dollars of expenses I tell you it is pretty cheap politics. We have run our state affairs, including the minority, at a haphazard sort of a plan. The taxes have increased under experimental ideas until the masses have groaned and when the time comes for a reduction the criticism of the man who seeks to accomplish it is peanut politics pure and simple.

In Lawrence Whitsett, right from your home county, the governor has a man who is doing his utmost to bring order out of chaos and who is going to be responsible for a whole lot of affairs that will happen in the next few years if the next re-elected governor. He is keeping a close count of state finances and knows almost to a penny what it costs to run affairs and where a saving can be accomplished. He does not mix in with politics, does not seek to advise the governor, but is the man behind the governor just the same.

Talking about seeking to influence the governor, or to influence the governor, I will say right here that some of my friends, a man who has known him for twenty years intimately, has roomed with him and eaten with him, told me some days ago, "You might just as well talk to a stone wall as to influence Philipp to do something other than what he believes is right. Politics doesn't count with him when it comes to the business of the state. He is a man who will do as he deems—pleases when he makes an appointment even if he knows it will lose votes. I know, for I tried it out and am through for good and all."

There you have it. We have a governor who has made his appointments for the fitness of the appointees not for the political effect. He does not care for that. He wants results and he is going to have something to say about the presidential nomination and who they will support, and not Wall Street or the money and industrial centers of the east.

LA CROSSE HAS HOPES OF THE STATE TITLE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 6.—The La Crosse high school football team defeated the Sparta high school at Sparta Friday afternoon, 62 to 0, winning the fifth straight game of the season. La Crosse has defeated Tomah, Sparta, Eau Claire, Chippewa Falls, and Wisconsin Rapids, having only three points scored against the school during this season. The eleven has won the undisputed championship of the western part of the state and is in the running for the state title.

SIDE LIGHTS on THE CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT

The old home of Burr Robbins on Eastern avenue caught fire early Tuesday morning, and only by quick and heroic work on the part of the firemen the last of the famous buildings of the Burr Robbins home and winter quarters were saved. The fire would have been gone. This for many years was pointed out to visitors as one of the points of interest that Jamesville people were proud of. Many a Christmas, New Year and Sunday turkey feast had been eaten at the Robbins' home, for Mrs. Robbins was not only a business woman and all ways with the show, but at home was a housekeeper and cook, and never happier when surrounded by her friends in her own home. The Watt family were there to a Sunday dinner on January 13, 1880, which was the day that Mr. Robbins' launch collided with Combs' vessel, which came so near costing him his life.

But the big horse barn, the ring barn, paint shops and blacksmith shops are all gone and most of the land, so all that remains of the once famous place is the old homestead and a few acres of land. It was in an accident the old mansion that I spent five years of the best of my life, and while Burr Robbins and I did not always agree, and more than once he told me that next year he would have a real manager, but when the time came, he never came, and so high that he made up his mind to get along with the one he had, and so he did, until he went out of the business. While at times I thought I knew a master to serve, yet whenever I knew about the business, I must give Burr Robbins the credit.

On Wednesday last, the Ringling show pulled into the city. The ringmasters at Haraboo and the wise old elephants waved their trunks and trumpeted to the town folks to let them know they were glad to get home once more. They came in the winter wagon, one they met, and made double quick time for the old homestead which has sheltered them so long.

Before you read this article, all that belongs to the great Ringling show will be packed away in the winter quarters, and soon there will be many men put to work remodeling the show for another season. So for the time being, the Ringling show will be packed away in the winter quarters, and soon there will be many men put to work remodeling the show for another season. So for the time being, the Ringling show will be packed away in the winter quarters, and soon there will be many men put to work remodeling the show for another season.

He had a complication of diseases and his age was against him. The Ringling show joined Ringling Bros. Advertising Car No. 2 at Springfield, Mass., May 21 last. He was a member of the Billposters' Union, Local 17, of Boston, Mass. His friends were few.

The following letter from the Hagenbeck-Wallace show will give you something of an idea of the way the different people with one of the big touring shows spend their time the coming winter:

A number of the folks have already announced that they will do after the season closes. The Australian Wales will play the S. & C. Time. Arthur Borchia will play vaudeville. Bert Cole will join his wife with the Tingo Shoes act. The Three Diericks Bros. will play the Loew time. Oscar Lowande will go to his home in Reading, Mass., where he will practice a new riding act for next season. The Tugene troupe of acrobats expect to play the New York Hippodrome, where they were all last winter.

The only time with the Adam Forepaugh show that I was ever late in opening the wagon was at Toledo, Ohio. I was about fifteen minutes late, and there was some five or six thousand people waiting around the wagon, and the door tenders all taking money at the door. To say that Adam Forepaugh lost his head is putting it mild, for as soon as he saw the door of the wagon raised, he started for the wagon with his old nicker came in the air, declaring that there would be a new man in that position the next year. But the crowd was so great that it closed the old man out, and it was more than three-quarters of an hour before he could get to where he could talk to me. And it was weeks after that he occasionally would refer to it, but my time came a little later.

Adam Forepaugh ran all his privileges, even to his own cook tent, and whenever the old man could make the people believe that it was impossible for him to get any butter in the town, he could get it. And he had much he had saved in not having butter for the three meals. But this was carried a little too far, and the working men, about 600 in number, when supper was called, and Mr. Forepaugh took a look at the table and found that there was no butter and one or two other things missing. They made up their minds long before that when it came to the table, they would not eat. I told them that I knew what had been going on, but that I had made up my mind that it was their affair, but any time when it came to the table, they would not eat. I told them that I knew what had been going on, but that I had made up my mind that it was their affair, but any time when it came to the table, they would not eat.

Talks On Advertising

(One of a series of lectures by Frank D. Hayes, given at the Evening School.)

Everyone cannot write forceful, interesting English, but anyone, with a little care, can improve his style. In writing copy for advertising, the writer must keep the following facts in mind: He must make his copy 1. Concise; 2. Simple; 3. Clear; 4. Honest; 5. Realistic; 6. Persuasive; 7. Time; 8. Seasonable; 9. Persuasive; 10. Original.

To be concise, the writer must cut down his words and not have them so massed that the copy will look hard to read.

To be clear, the writer must use no unusual or extra long words. The sentences should be short and direct. Familiar expressions and quotations are good when they do not destroy the dignity of the ad.

To be simple, the copy should not cover too many points. The most appealing points should be sought out and emphasized.

To be logical, the writer must discuss points in their natural order and should not jump from one proposition to another without proper connection.

To be honest, the writer must refrain from extravagant claims and his descriptions should be accurate and not so worded as to mislead.

To be realistic, the writer should discuss in detail the most effective selling points, playing up those points which demonstrate superior quality.

To be timely, a writer may connect up news events with his introduction. However, he should be careful not to let the result be far fetched.

To be reasonable, a writer may not word his copy as to fall in with the spirit of the season.

To be persuasive, the writer must give the buyer some good reason why he should make an immediate purchase.

To be original, the writer must not use too many stereotyped expressions, but should use clear, simple English, and say exactly what you mean in a straightforward, honest way. So few advertisers do, that any writer who creates this kind of copy will be original.

Humor and originality should not be confused. The use of humor in advertising is exceedingly dangerous. It may attract attention and be read, but the attraction it attracts will not result

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Edith Story Coming in "The Island of Regeneration."

"The Island of Regeneration," a six-part adaptation of Conan Doyle's novel of the same name, was produced under the direction of Harry Davenport, is the feature at the Majestic for next Thursday and Friday. In its entirety, "The Island of Regeneration" is an exceptionally satisfying production, as a human interest drama and as an artistic photoplay in the matter of physical environment. Edith Story is just the actress to portray the varied life of Katherine Brenton, first the apostle of advanced ideas that leave no room for humdrum marriage, next the scantily clad companion of a savage on a desert island, and last, but not least, the woman ready to become a law-abiding wife. Miss Story does a number of things exceedingly well during the years on the island when her character is undeveloped. She is a woman of a primitive life. She swims much as nature intended, without the hampering skirts of a modern bathing suit, likewise she poses gracefully on a rock—mud, mud, mud, mud, mud, mud. It should not be inferred, however, that there is anything unduly startling in the picture, for, on the contrary, the picture is perfectly beautiful. Katherine is a far better woman for her experience on the island, and she is the means of regenerating a man, born in civilization, developed as a savage, and then back among his own people—because of Katherine.

It is a picture marked by carefully staged scenes introducing plenty of exciting action. "The Nansen" is a picture of a man and a woman and a son reach a desert island in a lifeboat. The woman dies and John grows to manhood, speechless and totally ignorant. Twenty years after the destruction of "The Nansen," the second thread of the plot is introduced, with an exposition of the character of Katherine, who aims her advanced notions before the society folk of San Francisco, and finally, Langford, seemingly of a kindred spirit, persuades her to test her unconventional theories by accompanying him on a cruise.

AT THE PRINCESS.

"The Queen of Jungland" on Sunday. The Princess announces for tomorrow a highly interesting 3-part feature.

"The Queen of Jungland" is a most vivid and well constructed story, enacted for the most part in the Universal jungle. The young hunter who leaves the rest of the party because of his craving for drink, runs across a white girl brought up in the environs of the jungle. A romance follows and the tragic past of the girl is revealed. It is a very engaging picture, containing a good many thrills owing to the introduction of various wild animals. Joe Franz produced it, from a story by James Oliver Curwood, with a cast including Wellington A. Plavie, Edythe Sterling, Rex de Rosell and Sherman Dainbridge.

AT THE APOLLO.

"The Melting Pot" Coming Nov. 16 and 17.

A powerful photodrama is the film version of Israel Zangwill's "The Melting Pot," with Walker Whiteside in the hero role, the offering for Apollo on Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 16 and 17.

The crime of racial hatred and the glory of America as the haven of freedom and justice for all creeds and nationalities, is a two-fold inspiration which should recommend the production to all people just at this time.

The story of "The Melting Pot" is presented in heroic form. The horror and treachery of the massacre of Jews at Kishinev by the Russians that won for the date the title of "Black Easter," is shown in a series of tremendous scenes full of thrills and emotion.

The masterful working out of the plot and the story of love between the Jewish hero—victim of the bloody persecution and the Gentile daughter of the royal instigator of the massacre supplies all that is necessary to complete the dramatic picture.

But there is an added feature, a film tableau, giving an allegorical presentation of the conflicting elements pouring into "the melting pot" that alone is worth the price of admission.

AT THE APOLLO.

Hazel Dawn in "The Heart of Jennifer."

Previous to her appearance in "The Heart of Jennifer," the latest production of the famous Players Film company, Hazel Dawn had appeared in the Apollo on Monday, Hazel Dawn had appeared three times on the screen, in three vitally different types of impersonation, and each time was appreciated by her rapidly growing number of admirers. But in "The Heart of Jennifer," she combines the qualities that distinguished each of her former character creations, so that this role may be termed her most complete screen success to date.

The plot of this strong five part feature from the pen of Edith Barnard Delaney is novel and compelling. It is a story of love and sacrifice, and its originality and action as a whole the story is unconventional and refreshing.

Miss Dawn, appearing in the title part, renders a captivating and winning characterization of Jennifer. The role itself calls for a complete comprehension of dramatic art, and Miss Dawn interprets the character with evident understanding of its many possibilities.

James Kirkwood directed the production and appears in Miss Dawn's leading support, Russell Bassett, as her father, and Irene Howley, as the sister of her husband, offer splendid support to the story.

It is a conservative production that after her appearance in "The Heart of Jennifer," Miss Dawn will be considered in the very front rank of important actors who have transferred their talents to the screen.

AT THE APOLLO.

John Barrymore as "The Incurable Dukane."

John Barrymore, peer of all interpreters of refined comedy on the screen, favorite of all lovers of clear and wholesome film fun, returns to the screen in another success produced by the famous Players' Film company, a vivid photoplay of George C. Sutherland's popular story "The Incurable Dukane," the Paramount feature at the Apollo on Wednesday.

"The Incurable Dukane" is a unique combination of drama, comedy and romance, in which John Barrymore finds one of the greatest roles he has yet assumed since his first appearance on the screen under the famous Players' management. The comedy of the subject is derived from a series of ludicrous misfortunes which John Barrymore, as the young and incurable Dukane, is the constant victim; the drama from the thrilling manner in which the nephew do-well redeems himself, saving fortune and honor of his father, and the romance develops—in the actual manner of youth. There are quite a few spectacular scenes contained in the unusual production, consisting principally of the explosion of a huge dam in the course of construction by the senior Dukane, which is saved from total destruction only by the quick-wittedness and resourcefulness of Dukane, Jr.

These varying elements of photoplay composition prove effectively the versatility of the inimitable John Barrymore, which is never at a stage when its interest is not completely absorbing.

RETURN ENGAGEMENT

Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" to Be Brought Back Here for Another Week's Presentation.

Because of the exceptional satisfaction that "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's gigantic motion picture spectacle, gave to Myers Theatre audiences and because hundreds were turned away unable to get seats, Manager Myers announces that the picture will again be presented at his theatre in a few weeks.

"Reason for Her Social Prominence." "Elyah!" said the landlord of the tavern at Folkville, Ark., in reply to the question of the Kansas City drummer, "The lady that just passed is one of our most prominent society leaders. She's already caused four men to be shot, and as you saw, she's still medium young and considerable handsome."

AGRICULTURAL and GARDEN DEPT

ALLEN B. WEST, Director

Garden and Agricultural Department.
Question.—When is the best time to prune grape vines, spring or fall, and what is the best method, or fall?
Answer.—Grapes may be pruned either late in the fall or early in the spring. It is possible to do the work in the fall, but spring brings so many things that must be done before the growing season sets in that it is best to get as many of these duties as possible out of the way in the fall. As to the method, there is perhaps no one that is best for all conditions. There are several different methods, known as the Single Post Method, the High Renewal, the Low Renewal, the Cape Spur Renewal, and the Kniffin and Munson methods. These are fully described in Popular Fruit Growing by S. B. Green. However, it is not any one of these systems that follows the grape vine is really a very simple matter and if the following practice are borne in mind any one will be able with a little study to do the work satisfactorily:

(1) The old wood which has borne fruit once never bears again. (2) The wood that is formed one season produces the buds for the next season. (3) If all the new wood is left on the vine it will bear times more clusters than it can properly develop and they will all be small and imperfect. (4) If the buds of the new wood are cut away, leaving only from three to six buds to each stalk, the yield of good grapes will be much increased. (5) It is desirable in severe climates to have a vine so that it can be laid down on the ground with but little resistance, for in such locations it is necessary to get the vines into winter quarters. When vines have been neglected for years, it is a difficult matter to do anything with them in the way of pruning. For such Mr. Green, who is professor of Horticulture in the University of Minnesota, has this advice to offer:

"Sometimes such vines may best be brought into shape by cutting away the old wood, and then carefully thinning out and pruning the young growth that may start. At other times it may be best to cut off the whole vine at the surface of the ground. If this is done at the proper time, the vine will start again and will start from near the root, but only one or at most two should be saved. These sprouts should be trained the same as a new vine, except that in the one season they will bear a vine large enough to bear a good crop of fruit the following year. By either method only one fruiting season is lost, but as a rule the greatest success attends the latter method."

Question.—Shall I prune my apple trees this fall?
Answer.—The October number of the Wisconsin Horticulturist says of fall work in the orchard: "Don't prune. Pruning leaves wounds and these not only will not heal until growth begins, but the wood will check and the bark and underlying tissues die and thus prevent proper healing next spring."
This is good advice. When wounds do not heal these places are likely to become favorable places for the entrance of fungus and bacterial diseases, and we do not wish to favor them.

Question.—In last week's Gazette, reference was made to winter protection of shrubs. Please give further directions as to how it may be done.
Answer.—There are various ways in which shrubs may be given winter protection. It is possible with the climbing roses to lay them down on the ground and cover. Even cutting large bushes may be laid down by proceeding carefully. For this purpose, it is best to use a fork. Take a little earth out of the side of the clump on which you wish to lay them down, then shove the fork down close to the canes on the other side and push and pull till the clump lies flat. Then lay the tops down and leave until the ground freezes. This laying down should be done early before the canes and ground are frozen. After freezing weather sets in, leaves or dry before the ground freezes. If covered before the ground freezes, the mice are apt to select such places for their winter quarters. Carpet or burr lap will furnish protection for roses if the Horticulturist that it is the shine and not the frost that winter kills roses. If impossible to lay the shrubs down, they may be wrapped in burlap or tarred paper and secured to a post driven in the ground, unless the shrub itself is sufficiently strong to hold the wrapping.
It is much less trouble to plant the hardy kinds, but if one has time, a few of the tenderer ones may be included in the care for properly. OutstankonBethMiddl4d, successful in it. It is well also to give the hardy perennials the same care. The perennials, a good mulch of leaves, will live without, but the growth will be better next year for the covering. It is nature's way of caring for her plants. ALLEN B. WEST.

Jalta, Newport of Russia, Loses Fame and Prestige Over Night

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—Jalta, the Newport of Russia, to which even such favored regions of the world as the garden lands of California and the Riviera must yield when climates are compared, is today a stronghold of society utterly eclipsed by war, a lonely, unvisited little village whose prestige and fame have departed overnight. A report unattended, forgotten by the press and by all the people, who in peace times eagerly read about all the social splendors there, begins a statement just given out by the National Geographic Society. Jalta, normally, would just be entering upon the height of its season, its gayest, most important two months of the year, had not a world war closed it, together with Monte Carlo, Karlsbad, and scores of other places of good food, beauty and amusement. The Imperial court, the statesmen, diplomats and members of the great Russian command, now carrying the intolerable burdens of the war, would be gathered there in times of quiet, and social Russia would follow in their course.

Jalta is a beautiful place built on the shelf of a mountain, whose foot bathes in the bluest and mildest of waters to be found all around the coast of the Black Sea. This little seaport, in the government of Taurida, on the southern coast of Crimea, thoroughly deserved the distinction of being the vacation-home of celebrities. Behind it, and between it and the north, the solid mountain greens, which merge into deeper and deeper shades until at the bare summits they are greenish-brown, rise to heights of from 2,500 to 3,000 feet. These are the southern fringe of the Jalta Mountains. The tops of these peaks are often covered in icy mists, while in Jalta and on its bay rest the mildest of spring weather. Snow never falls in Jalta, which boasts an annual mean temperature of 56 degrees Fahrenheit. Its climate is said to be superior to that of Nice. The sunbathers are not oppressively hot, there is less rain in autumn and in winter, the cool is less crisp in winter, and the sunshine of autumn is said to fall balmer here than anywhere else in the world.

OPEN SHORT COURSE FOR THIRTIETH YEAR

Nearly 4,000 Farmers' Sons Have Received Instruction in Intensified Farming.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Madison, Wis., Nov. 6.—When the Wisconsin short course opens on Nov. 26 to receive students it will be for the thirtieth year of its work. The short course was established in 1886 to bring farm raised boys in touch with modern methods of farming. It has succeeded in advancing the practice of intensive agriculture as practically no other agency has. This has been accomplished directly through facts taught to the 3,774 Wisconsin students who have been enrolled and indirectly as well, by means of examples of improved farming which the better grade of these students have demonstrated at home.

The formation of the Wisconsin agricultural experiment station is an outgrowth of the short course and its membership now includes more than 1,500 farmers whose new seed grains are known far and wide. In an announcement today D. H. Otis, in charge of the work, says that the records show the short course has been attended by a total of 44,444 students, 97% of whom have come from other states and foreign countries. During the first term there were nineteen students present.

Until 1895 no certificates were granted to students and the course consisted of but one winter term of twelve weeks. Since that time the courses have been changed to two winter terms of fourteen weeks each, upon the satisfactory completion of which the students are given a diploma.

A WORLD FAMOUS BOOK.

With Selections Made by 50,000 People.
Fifty thousand people made their choice of the best things they ever saw in print, of the things they couldn't get along without in their daily lives, of the things that gripped them so hard they couldn't bear to part with them, and sent them to Joe Mitchell Chaplin who was offering prizes for these very things. The result was "Heart Throbs"—the two volumes now being distributed by this paper, almost free. In these volumes are many "old friends" long since forgotten—whose acquaintance will be revived with whoops of joy. Many new ones, likewise, whose friendship will be a precious acquisition to be cultivated to one's advantage. There is something to be said of these books that can be said of no other.

THE GAZETTE'S MOTORIST PROBLEM DEPARTMENT

(Published Saturdays.)

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Is there any advantage in using chains on the front as well as the rear wheels?

Chains on the front wheels will not do any good in bad going. A chain on one front wheel will answer the purpose well under ordinary conditions to prevent the front wheels from skidding.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Kindly inform me the mica spark plug gives less trouble and last longer than those made of porcelain.

Consistent with the policy of this column, we cannot answer queries of preference in design. However, it might be said that mica plugs are a more easily broken than a mica plug, but on the other hand it is not so likely to become saturated with oil.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—I have just bought a 1913 four-cylinder touring car and am told that the oil level in crank case up to a certain point. This means adding some oil every day. What I want to know is whether this is true or if it is drained off once in a while, does it know much about an engine but, this seems changed? How often should the oil be changed?

It is advisable to drain the case and add fresh oil about every 1,600 miles. It is good economy to do this and also to use oil of the best quality.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Is there any advantage in using a jump spark attachment above spark plug?

The jump spark attachment will show you at a glance whether the plug is being delivered to the plug. However, it is not a difficult matter to determine this without much apparatus. A screwdriver or other metal instrument with insulated handle will serve well to short circuit the plug at the terminal and determine whether current is reaching the plug.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—The electric side and rear lights on my car are connected by the same switch. The rear lamp is burned separately by unscrewing the side lamp, or how would I have to have the car wired so that the rear lamp only may be used?

If the lamps are connected in parallel the bulbs may be removed from the sockets in the side lamp, leaving only the rear lamp to burn. If they are connected in series that cannot be done. In a circuit which is connected in series, one of the side lamps must be removed, and if the rear lamp continues to burn they are wired in parallel. If you and the electrician connected in series and change to parallel, it will be necessary to reduce the voltage of the battery, or else to use higher voltage lamps.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Please tell me if dry cell batteries can be satisfactorily used for lighting headlights. How many hours would six cells last? If dry cells can be used please state what size bulb would be suitable and what other attachment would be needed to install electric lights on my car now having candle lamps.

Dry cells are not serviceable for electric lighting purposes. It would be best to use a storage battery with a six-volt storage battery. Two six-volt lamps are good for the side and rear lights. About twelve candle power lamps are good for the headlights. Aside from fitting your present lamp equipment with electric bulbs and wiring nothing will be required further than the necessary control switches and wiring from battery to lights.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Will you please tell me what to do when gears will not mesh—that is, when I release the clutch the gears keep revolving?

You seem to have what is known as a "splining" clutch—that is, it will not slow down and stop on disengaging. If it is a cone clutch this may be due to want of lubrication between the male cone and the shaft on which it runs, which is generally an extension of the crankshaft. Quite frequently a grease cup is fitted to this part. If, however, this is not the trouble, get a repair man to make a clutch break. This may be in the form of an arm carrying a leather pad, which comes into contact with the rim of the clutch when it is fully withdrawn. If a multiple disk clutch running in oil, using a thinner grade of oil or gradually add grease in small quantities, testing each time.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—I have purchased a 1914 car and unfortunately it worked O. K. all summer until now. The cylinders frequently knock and a grinding noise can be heard when HELPFUL HINTS.

There are some cars in which the cylinder casting is so close to the dash-board that the latter becomes too warm for the comfort of the occupants of the front seat. Considerable relief can be obtained by covering the dash-board with a thin sheet of asbestos, leaving a little air space, if possible, between the lining and the dash. Usually, it will be unnecessary to cover the whole board, unless the heating is very great.

When washing a car, care should be taken not to splash water on the motor. A little carelessness in this manner will cause a great deal of trouble. A little water in the carburetor and magnet means considerable difficulty in starting. The motor will run properly if the water is removed. Usually have a canvas, which they throw over the motor to prevent water getting into the vital parts aforementioned.

A motor should not be permitted to labor, even if it can be kept going. When running very slowly the sudden blows of the explosions setting against the resistance of the slow-moving crankshaft set up tremendous stresses, which are as dangerous as they are unnecessary.

Despite the fact that a well-built electric lighting system on a car gives little trouble, it is important that the devices provided by the manufacturer to indicate derangement should be watched. It is almost impossible to form the habit of looking at indicators as it is to form the habit of ignoring them.

Probably the muffler is one of the most neglected parts of a car. The electric lighting system on a car gives little trouble, it is important that the devices provided by the manufacturer to indicate derangement should be watched. It is almost impossible to form the habit of looking at indicators as it is to form the habit of ignoring them.

BELGIAN SOLDIERS IN HOSPITALS NEED BOOKS.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

New York, Nov. 6.—Among the thousands of Belgian soldiers and low in hospitals in England and in France, detained in camps in Holland, and prisoners in Germany there is a widespread need of good books, and a committee that has been formed to enlist American aid in the matter announces that books or money for their purchase will be received by Pierre Mail, Belgian Consul General in New York. The members of the honorary committee include Emanuel Havenith, the Belgian Minister at Washington, Joseph R. Choate, Charles J. Bonaparte, Rev. J. P. Stillemaas of the Belgian Relief Fund and Louis de Sadeleur, Minister of State for Belgium, who is in New York.

A statement given out by the committee reads:

"The heroism of the Belgian Soldiers has won universal admiration. 'Thousands of them are now in hospitals in England and in France, detained in camps in Holland, and prisoners in Germany. They are suffering and deprived of liberty, without news from their relatives now somewhere in poverty or dead, the anxiety of those brave men must be most painful.

"Well educated as they are, and without recreations any intelligent person is looking for, nothing can do more to alleviate their sufferings than literature in their own language. 'There is a real need among those Belgian Soldiers for books in French and Flemish, and to a certain extent in English (especially works of travel and novels, history, books on electricity, mechanics, etc., and illustrated magazines of all kinds; also grammars for the study of English; French-English dictionaries and vice-versa.)"

AUSTRALIA IS AGAINST CONSCRIPTION METHODS.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 6.—When a delegation representing the Trades Hall of Melbourne waited upon Premier Fisher a week ago and asked him for a pronouncement as to the attitude of the government toward conscription, Mr. Fisher declared that conscription would not be introduced in Australia unless the people of the Commonwealth were given an opportunity of voting upon the question. He added that the government had no intention of bringing in a bill dealing with conscription, and as for himself he was opposed to it.

Throughout the hearing Mr. Fisher showed great impatience over the whole subject of conscription. He said: "So far as the government is concerned it stands nearly exactly as it has always stood. It is pledged under the Defense Act to make our own men by levies for the defense of the dominion."

When a member of the delegation suggested that the Allies of Great Britain might be pressing her to put a conscription army into the field, he replied with some heat: "They would not be allowed any such impertinence."

ENGLISH YOUTHS MAKE MONEY TAKING STRANGERS AROUND IN THE DARK.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Nov. 6.—The darkening of the London streets has provided a new occupation for the small boy. Armed with a small electric flashlight, he takes his position soon after nightfall at the suburban subway station and carefully scans the faces of arriving passengers. Espying a stranger, he advances, and flashing his little lamp, offers to conduct the stranger to his destination. The price of the service, which is generally eagerly taken advantage of, is ten or fifteen cents, according to the distance.

Chime and Chimes. It is not "positively incorrect" to use the word chimes. "We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow," exclaimed Falstaff, and the "Chimes of Bruges" is an expression that has been used "correctly" enough, too, a thousand times.

PIONEER OF MONROE HALE AT EIGHTY-ONE

A. C. Dodge Has Been Actively Engaged in Business at Monroe for Fifty Years.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Monroe, Wis., Nov. 6.—A. C. Dodge, the oldest business man in Monroe and Green county, and who is believed to be longer in one line of business than any other man in southern Wisconsin, is today celebrating his eighty-first birthday, with a family gathering.

Mr. Dodge was born in Barre, Washington county, Vermont, Nov. 8, 1834. His early years were spent on a farm in the Green Mountain state, but in 1854 he decided to come west and try his fortunes. After a short time in Chicago he joined the Chicago and North Western railroad, where he was in charge of engineering work on what is now the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad. He also found employment in bridge building and teaching school, being for three years connected with the village schools in Monroe. Later he looked after his brother's planing mill in Monroe, and in 1865, just fifty years ago this summer, he entered the lumber business in Monroe, being engaged in the same continuously since that time. Although today celebrating his eighty-first birthday, he boastfully declares that in his fifty years in business he was never compelled to lose a day from active attention to his business.

Mr. Dodge became of age in 1855. That was one of the crucial years in the political history of Wisconsin, and in 1856 the republican party first entered the national field with candidates for the offices of the national government. Mr. Dodge voted for General John C. Fremont in that year, and he has voted for every republican presidential candidate down to William Howard Taft, in 1912. He has been more than a voter; he has been a leader in the republican party in Wisconsin. He served two terms in the lower house of the state legislature, being elected in 1898 and again in 1900. In 1890 he was an alternate delegate from Wisconsin to the national convention in Chicago which placed in nomination James A. Garfield as the standard-bearer of the republican party, and in 1898 was a presidential elector from Wisconsin, casting a ballot which contributed to the placing of Benjamin F. Harrison in the White House.

November 4, 1869, just fifty-five years ago on Thursday, the marriage of Mr. Dodge and Miss Sarah E. Kider was solemnized. To them were born three children: Charles Sumner, who is associated with his father in the lumber business, Mrs. Flora E. Dodge-Drach, and Lewis who met an accidental death in 1911, and who several years previously had been secretary and treasurer of the Dodge Lumber company. Mrs. Dodge died in 1911.

Mr. Dodge's business in Monroe covers several blocks, together with filling twelve warehouses, and is one of the largest lumber companies in southern Wisconsin.

WHITE GLOVES WORN BY OFFICIAL, FATAL

French Soldier Tells of Suspense Before Making Charge—Fate of One Officer.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Paris, Nov. 5.—Once in a while you strike a soldier who has seen something and can tell about it. He is the exception, but the others everything is a jumble of volleys and explosions and running and falling and awakening in hospitals. A captain with a fractured thigh in a hospital here was one of the lucid ones. Said he:

"The Saturday morning of the advance everybody knew the assault was to begin at 9:15. The artillery preparation had been wonderful and the men were really impatient to get away. You can't blame them either, for it is no fun holding your hands and waiting for a thing like that. 'Some of them lighted cigarettes which they rolled themselves with fingers that didn't tremble a particle. Some lighted their pipes two minutes before the charge. There was little fidgeting but the noise of the cannonade discouraged talk. 'Looking down the line I saw my lieutenant drawing on his white kid gloves. He was very young and this was to be his first charge. He wanted to do it properly, in Saint-Cyr style. Had I been close enough I would have ordered him to take them off. Hundreds of Saint-Cyr cadets were mowed down at the beginning of the charge. I saw one wearing white gloves. It was the marriage of youth and war, and the gloves must needs be the gloves."

"Our previously regulated and compared time-pieces reached 9:15, my lieutenant struck a match, lit a cigarette and leaped forward out of the trench waving his men after him. I leaped upon the parapet at the same instant, my men following me yelling something which was their effort to make 'La Marseillaise' sound above the guns. 'I began to fall about me, so I hurried the company forward into a little gully where we stopped a moment waiting for a lull. It was here that I learned of the death of my lieutenant in the white gloves. I rushed my men and started forward under a rain of machine-gun fire. A shell exploded so near that I was thrown off my feet, but nothing was broken so I went on. Then a sharp bullet pierced my thigh, breaking the bone. The battle was over so far as I was concerned. It was only 9:30, too—15 minutes from the start. Rotten luck. 'I band up my wound as best I could and waited under the greatest display of fire-works one ever saw, waited for the stretcher men. Finally two came, and one of them one of my men with a bullet in his stomach, so I directed the men to take him. I told the men to come back for me—which they did at 6 o'clock in the afternoon."

Rock, Nov. 5.—Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Kellogg entertained a twenty-five couple at a Halloween barn party Friday evening. The barn was decorated with Halloween festoons of Jack o'lanterns, black paper cats and miniature pumpkins. Many were the appropriate games that were played and enjoyed by all present. At midnight, a four course buffet luncheon was served and it was a late hour when they bid their host and hostess good night.

Miss Zeeman entertained Sunday at a six o'clock dinner in honor of Miss Lilian Podewell, bride-to-be.

Our students from the city schools are enjoying a two days vacation while the teachers are attending convention in Milwaukee.

A Story Of Suffering

Told by a Janesville Man.

Here is a story of severe suffering that many people go through day by day without relief. But why endure it? Read Mr. Wright's words and you will realize that much suffering does not have to be endured. Proof of merit like the following is what you have been looking for.

A. S. Wright, railroad engineer, 321 N. Chatham St., Janesville, says: "The jarring and shaking of a train, so it's no wonder I began to feel that something was wrong. My kidneys acted irregularly. I had severe back-aches and pains across the small of my back. It hurt me to get up or down. Almost all railroad men now about Doan's Kidney Pills so, of course, I used some, too. In a short time they put a stop to all the pains and made my kidneys act as they should."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Wright had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props. Buffalo, N. Y.

THE BLASKE FUEL SAVER

Will Save Money in Spite of the Drop in Coal

Just as we had installed a number of the Blaske Fuel Savers on various large heating plants in the city, the price of coal takes a drop. Every time a Blaske Fuel Saver is installed the coal man loses from 40% to 50% of his usual coal order from that building or house. It is bound to be felt by the coal men.

But if coal should drop 50% in price this fuel saving device would still save enough on the coal bill to pay for itself in a short time.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN SAVING NEARLY HALF YOUR COAL BILL?

These parties were and they are loud in their praise of what the Blaske Fuel Saver had saved them.

ROYAL WORCESTER CORSETS

CORSET PERFECTION

At Moderate Cost

WHATEVER the price you wish to pay, there are certain fashion fundamentals that you really must insist upon.

Royal Worcester Corsets give you this exquisite freshness and correctness of style without the lavish expenditure.

The proof of this is the new models themselves now on display. The skirt for instance is shortened—in harmony with the released lines of your outer costumes. The bust line is higher and freer—as the mode commands. The waist is clearly curved and the back has that entrancing flatness in compliance with the vogue.

And the sum of these amendments is stylish newness. The assured confidence that you are perfectly appraised in the height of mode. The two models illustrated are correct for present wear.

"And have you noticed that none of these claims seem to have been taken in good faith? That none of the filers have complied in spirit with the homestead law? I have scoured these hills for seven miles every way—except west—and at every filing there is the barest hold of tenure—a windowless shack—just enough to nail the law by its letter. Nowhere have I seen a cleared field, nor one sign of tillage.

"The Man Who Built This Didn't Intend to Stay."

Mr. Sandry, I believe we have stumbled upon a huge government swindle, a case of land-fraud gigantic in its proportions."

Sandry was aghast. "Why, what do you mean? Miss Ordway, do you mean that the companies are crooked?"

"Not so fast. I believe Hampden is crooked, and that possibly Frazer was. For the latter—it is too late and not in our scheme to nail him. But Hampden we'll hang high as Haman—and that before he can fetch the East Belt with its store of wealth."

She was leaning very near as she whispered this, and in the burst of mental light which followed her words Sandry put his hands on her shoulders.

"You are positively wonderful!" he breathed, "the most wonderful woman in the whole world. How on earth did you find these things out?"

"Hampden," said Poppy with a shrug of her shoulders under Sandry's hands; "he's furnishing data with a vengeance."

"But why? For the love of heaven, why are you doing all this? I can't just understand."

"With a little soft motion, charming in the airy acceptance of its own daring, the woman of the world put up her hand and laid it with a caress over the one on her shoulder.

Her face, tilted upward in the darkness, shone like a flower and he could just barely see the curving line in her lips, dark against its light.

In the mist and the chill the subtle perfume, that always seemed to strike one's senses only after she had passed, suddenly thickened and Sandry beheld on the instant lights and flowers, gay gowns and evening dress of men—the thousand intimate things and sounds of home flashed before him.

Under the touch of her velvet palm his own grip tightened and Poppy Ordway, quick to feel her first real entrance into his inner consciousness, pushed the sudden advantage.

"Why?" she said softly, "why? For— you. Do you think I, who am trained in investigation"—she halted with a little catch of voice and breath—"who have to dig into every promising situation because of my work—could sit by and see that man down you without plunging into the breach? Indeed no. And we'll win, my friend—we'll win."

With an inimitable gesture, at once daring and hesitant, she lifted his hand from her shoulder, brushing it, as if unconsciously, across her cheek, held it a moment and turned away toward the camp.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Red Bar on the Waters. A day later Miss Ordway packed an expensive bag of real alligator and made ready for a departure.

"I'm going to Salem, partner," she said. "If Hampden gets anxious enough to inquire openly, tell him I'm after—clothes."

She smiled to herself, thinking of those millions of trees. For its own sake, the pursuit of Hampden was beginning to enthrall her professional instinct, but there was a flicker of passion under her lashes, a sleepy look of anticipation, as she glanced aside at Sandry on the step beside her.

"I may be away a week—maybe a month. I'll drop you a line occasionally."

A yearning sense of loss and loneliness gripped Sandry as he took her hand at parting, leading to his clasp an unwonted tightness, and to his voice a sense of huskiness. She was home and the things thereof, this woman who was an orchid among the pines, and with her going went something he had scarcely realized, yet which he would sorely miss.

The camp seemed more than usually dreary in the days that followed. The fog ribbons twined and twisted continually along the hills, the pines brought their marching ranks closer in upon the shrinking valley, and Sandry was taken with an acute attack of the blues.

"S'lets," he said abruptly as he met the girl one noon at the pump, "will you ride with me tomorrow? It's Sunday and we can take a lunch. What do you say?"

She did not meet his eyes, her own somber ones glancing down the slough.

"Yes," she said quietly.

They were up betimes the following morning. Ma Daily cooked an early breakfast and Sandry sat down for the first time with the girl at table. Conversation languished until a gentle tread sounded on the floor and the Preacher came in, his delicate face aglow from the touch of icy water. John Daily, too, lumbered in at the same moment.

"Sleep well, father?" he asked.

"As always, son. The hovering of God's hand is like the sound of many wings—hushing—ah, so hushing. Isn't it so—ah—ah—I have forgot—"

The pathetic, childlike eyes searched Sandry's face in straining inquiry.

"What is it I would remember?" he asked plaintively.

"Nothing, father. It is all well."

Siletz had pushed back the bench for him. Now she laid her slim hand lovingly upon his and looked in his face, a smile curving up the lips above the broken sign. As the two hands lay upon the oldcloth Sandry noticed them—one white and fine veined and shapely, with the slender, pointed fingers of a dreamer—the other olive and shapely and with the same slim-pointed fingers.

"Alike," he mused, "how very much alike. Why, they are counterparts!"

As he led Black Bolt to the hammer-block for Siletz to mount he heard snatches of song from the bunkhouse. Collins was outside, stretching a fresh deerhide against the planks.

The owner turned in his saddle and looked back at the camp—his camp—as they trotted away down the green valley. It lay snugly tight against the pine-clad hills, a primitive force in its suggestion. As they passed the lower railway he stopped and surveyed the brown slough, a solid floor of logs as far as he could see, even until it lost itself between its low, tumbled banks.

"Fine!" he said aloud, "our logs are drifting clear to the backwater at Toledo! We'll meet our date all right."

"Of course," said Siletz, and it was the first word she had spoken.

At a natural clearing they reined in to breathe the horses, and Sandry turned to the girl.

"S'lets," he said, "tell me how it is that you have lived all your life so near the ocean and have never seen it, when you have wanted to so much?"

The rare smile lighted her face and she turned to him.

"I was afraid," she said.

"What? Afraid? Afraid of what?"

"Of how it might look in truth. I know how it looks in my own pictures. It—It might not—look the same."

For a moment the man was silent before the subtle fineness of the thought, amazed to find it in this simple child of the logging country.

"And why now?" he asked curiously.

"Why do you go now?"

"You go," said Siletz as simply as Kolawmie would speak in his government cabin at the reservation to the north.

"You're a great dreamer, S'lets," said Sandry.

She nodded.

The horses, having taken their required rest, started forward of their own will after the manner of hill-bred horses, and silence prevailed, save for the swish and slip of the iron-shod hoofs. It took an hour to reach the crest of the range.

Siletz had fallen adreaming, swaying unconsciously to every motion of Black Bolt; one hand swinging outward as encouragement to the dog whose anxious eyes were raised from time to time toward it.

They traveled steadily, and presently the long roll of the surf began to sound insidiously through the thickets of vine maple, to war with the high song of the dominant pines.

"Ho!" said Siletz at last, softly, "hear it! Hear it! Hear it singing with a thousand tongues! Ho!—Ho!"

Sandry looked swiftly back, an odd excitement taking him at the note in her voice—an alien note, beyond his understanding. She had reined up and was sitting erect, her head up high, her lips fallen part, her eyes beginning to glow with a hidden fire. He knew that somewhere in the recesses of her nature a great tide of emotion was banking in, full flow.

They did not strike Yaquina bay, for the trail led straight west from Daily's, and he knew they would come out on the great cliffs below the lighthouse on Cape Foulweather. Here the land reared itself—as one who shields himself, palms outward—against the insistent thunder of the sea. They mounted the lifting rise of the cliffs, and stood at the edge of a thin fringe of stunted fir where Sandry tied the horses. Siletz had slipped down at once, and he noticed that she was trembling in every limb.

She plunged ahead strongly and Sandry followed, his eyes on her face lest he lose one expression, one small scene of the unfolding of this flower-soul. Without warning, it burst upon her around a hummock—the great, heaving ocean under a dull sky—and it was gray as her own mist indeed, wide and mysterious and forever moving in its place, fringed with the rolling surf that broke white upon its sands a hundred feet below.

"Gray!" she cried shrilly, "I knew it! A floor under the foot of God!"

To the left a steep path, cut by steps in the sandy earth, led its porlous way down to the beach. Turning swiftly she dropped into it between its walls and began leaping down.

"S'lets!" cried Sandry sharply, "be careful!"

Even as he spoke she lost her footing and went headlong down the cliff, rolling over and over in the sliding sand, to bring up fifteen feet below where the path turned sideways on a little shelf. Without heed she gathered herself, threw back her braids and rushed on, leaping downward like a deer.

When Sandry reached her she was ankle deep in the surf, gazing with all her starved nature in her eyes, that yet shone with a martial fire. Then, suddenly, through some rent in the sodden sky, a beam of light shot through the mist, transfiguring it. It was midday and not the time for the reds and purples of the sunset, but for some reason beyond the minds of men, the blue-gray mist caught up the light and turned it into a wondrous bar of crimson, edged with fairy gold, and it lay out across the waters, a path to all the world.

Sandry saw the look of intoxication creep into her eyes, the drunkenness of emotion that dulled them drowsily. Lines drew in her oval cheeks and slowly her face broke into a look of anguish. She put up an arm and covered it, turning toward the beach. Sandry caught her in his arms and held her, weeping hard, against his breast.

"I cannot bear it!" cried Siletz from this shelter, "oh, I hurt! I hurt!"

"Sh! Sh!" whispered Sandry huskily. "It is too great—too great—for the Night Wind to behold."

The ride home was silent, with Sandry in the lead, his spirit still stirred and shaken by what he had beheld. They did not speak again until the camp lay before them at the big bend.

"S'lets," said Sandry then, "Black Bolt is yours. None other shall ever ride him again."

She said nothing, but her fingers tightened in the gaiter straps as she looked on in the silent cresting before her.

When they rode up across the small bridge that spanned the slough below the foot-log the foreman was standing beside the hammer-block. He reached up huge, bare arms and swung the girl lightly down, sending a glance across her shoulder that arrested the owner's attention instantly.

"Mr. Sandry," he said simply, "Hampden's got us. There ain't a jack in the camp but Collins. He's bought the mill at Toledo an' offered a two-dollar-a-day raise to every timberjack an' riverhog in the county. Even Harris. Daily's big voice deepened with bitterness, 'that we was payin' seven dollars a day—an' he was worth it, for there ain't a flier like him this side o' Frisco—has gone—for nine! Hampden come to the very gate up there on the road an' gathered 'em out fer a talk—an' they come back an' packed like sheep! Damn their hides! He had contracts fer two years at them wages—an' they signed like fools—scrambled fer the chance! An' some o' 'em's ben fightin' him a couple o' years! He had wagons waitin' in a string at the bend o' the road—ready to move 'em that had cabins! Burson an' Glick an' McMasters—they all loaded their duffle an' biked. An' I don't know of another bunch o' loggers this side o' Portland!"

Sandry, his face gone white as sand under his hat brim, stared at the blank windows of the cabins.

"Eat, son," said Ma Daily firmly when he entered the long room, "eat first an' think after. A empty stomach's a poor boiler for workin' steam."

And Sandry, looking into her kindly old face, saw the sanity of her advice. He took her fat hand—and a spoon and the end of a dish towel also—holding it tight in his own for a moment.

"Right you are, ma," he answered, and sat him down.

CHOIR LEADER STATES HE TOOK FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE UPON ADVICE OF FR. JOHN HIMSELF

W. B. Tyrell, formerly of Lowell, who was choir director in St. Patrick's Church forty years ago under Father John O'Brien (from whom Father John's Medicine got its name) first took the medicine upon the advice of the pastor himself. Mr. Tyrell says he "is continually chanting the praises of this old prescription."

Father John's Medicine Was so Named by the People.

Father John's Medicine is a physician's prescription. Prescribed for the Rev. Father John O'Brien of Lowell, Mass., by an eminent specialist in 1855.

Father John recommended this prescription to his parishioners and friends and in this way it became known as Father John's Medicine.

Father John's Medicine is recommended for coughs, colds and throat and lung troubles and to make flesh and strength. It is not a patent medicine, and does not contain alcohol or poisonous drugs. It has been in use over 50 years.

If you have any difficulty in securing Father John's Medicine from your druggist, write to Father John's Medicine, Lowell, Mass., enclosing $1.00 for a large bottle by express prepaid.

"The Next Time I Advertise I Will Hire Some One To Answer the Phone"

There is no shortage of replies to advertisements in the classified columns of the Gazette. Mr. Hughes, R. F. D. No. 5, is quite satisfied with his experience. The Gazette Printing Co. Janesville, Wis., Nov. 2, 1915. Gentlemen: On October 27 I telephoned the following want ad to your paper.

WANT A MAN BY THE MONTH to work on farm. Must be good milk-er. B. E. Hughes, Rte. 5, Bell phone 5022 black.

That same evening I received a call from a man wanting work, who saw the ad. My man was at work the next morning and within the next three days received nine telephone calls and two letters from a neighboring town, all wanting to work. The next time I put an ad in your paper I will hire some one to answer the phone as we haven't time.

Yours respectfully

B. E. HUGHES.
